St. A supports letter on Law's resigning

Voice group eyes more change

By Neil Fater

Members of St. Augustine Church's Voice of the Faithful affiliate are encouraged by their three priests' decision to sign a letter asking Cardinal Bernard Law to resign. But they also plan to continue pursuing additional ways to repair damage caused by the sexual abuse crisis in the Boston Archdiocese.

"Our Catholic Church cannot heal until all the infection is out of the wound," said Emilie Gilbert, a VOTF member.

Gilbert noted that while Christians normally are anticipating the joy of Christmas in December, Catholics this year are focused on new elements of the church scandal.

"As bad as it is, we're at a better place now than we were last year when these things were still swept under the rug," said Gilbert. "There is hope that we will come out better and much stronger. It's painful, but you have to face the truth."

Voice of the Faithful will hold a meeting tonight, Thursday, Dec. 12 from 7:30 to 9 to do just that, and to listen to residents who wish to speak. Also speaking at this meeting will be a victim of sexual abuse in the Catholic Church, and Anne Barrett Doyle, head of the Coalition for Catholics and Survivors.

Doyle marvels at the number of Andover priests who signed the letter – five – and their relationship with the town's active members of Voice of the Faithful.

"I feel so hopeful when I see priests united with the laity, because that's the only way to change," says

Though no known victims are Andover residents, Catholics in town are playing a large role in efforts to change the archdiocese:

Emilie Gilbert joined Voice of the Faithful because each of her oldest three boys (clockwise from left: Austin, 14; Graham, 16; Colby, 7) have been altar servers and she once worked closely with now-defrocked priest John Geoghan, who baptized Colby. Reading about Geoghan gave her "goose bumps."

Pastor: 'We need to heal and see justice served'

By Neil Fater

After a week in which he learned more about the extent and effect of the sexual abuse crisis in the Boston Archdiocese, Rev. Al Ellis, pastor of St. Augustine Church, knew what he had to do at Mass this past Saturday evening – he had to read a letter urging Cardinal Bernard Law to resign.

"To go up to the pulpit and ignore all of that is not to have a sense of where the people are," said Ellis. "I want to assure the people that they have a safe place at St. Augustine, and a place for their children.

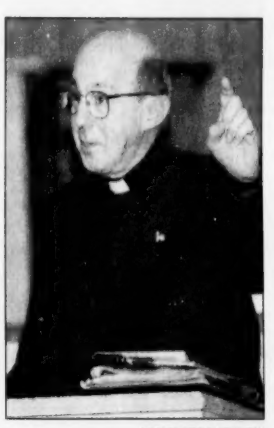

"You don't want to be a renegade," said Ellis, but he added that "it's a good thing to take a stand."

After reading the letter heard round the Catholic world – one that he and 57 other priests signed, including four others in Andover – Ellis asked his parishioners to raise their hands if they supported the letter. St. Augustine members gave him their response loud and clear.

"A great majority of the people there raised their hands," said Paul Dow, vice chairman of St. Augustine's pastoral council. "Some hands went up almost before he could ask the question."

"When he left the pulpit, everyone stood up and gave him a standing ovation," he added. "It looked like everyone was

TARGETING THE BUDGET

A ribbon cutting ceremony was held at the new schools on Sunday. Next up: deciding for which projects the bell tolls.

School parents, employees on budget defense

By Ben Hellman

The potential $2.9 million budget deficit hanging over teachers' and administrators' heads and the specter of further cuts has been the cause of fear and loathing lately for many in the schools.

For instance, middle-school teachers, principals and parents made a pilgrimage to the committee last week to remind members that middle schools bore the brunt (53 percent) of position cuts this year. Then, Health Coordinator Dave Nichols, while delivering the Youth Risk Survey results, stressed the importance of having health teachers who know and have relationships with the kids.

"It's very frightening to a lot of us," said Nichols. In addition to touting his program's importance at the meeting, Nichols gave ideas as to how he is planning to save money. Banding together with other districts to conduct the Youth Risk Survey and having a private corporation foot the bill is one plan. Offering the survey every other year is another idea.

"We're trying to trim anything we possibly can," said Nichols.

For schools: Larger classes, more fees?

By Meir Rinde

Students could see their class sizes swell while their parents pay more for after-school activities if the schools are forced to trim $2.5 million from the projected school budget, Superintendent Claudia Bach said last night.

During a public forum at Andover High School, Bach challenged about 65 parents, teachers, administrators and town officials to try making the painful choices that would erase the high school's $400,000 share of the projected shortfall.

Bach said she hoped the forum, the first of three scheduled through mid-January, would show her what kind of cuts parents found most acceptable and let residents know how bad the coming budget crunch could be.

"We want them to understand the enormity of the problem," she said.

The school system is projecting a $50.1 million budget for 2003-04, a 7-percent increase over this school year. But with the state expected to cut aid to communities, money alloted to the schools will increase less than 2 percent, according to a forecast prepared by business administrator Bernard A. Tuttle.

ROOSTING IN TURKEY TOWN

Wild bird attacking joggers, trapping people in homes

By Neil Fater

When he first came to the neighborhood most people looked at him with a sense of amusement. Soon, however, he was pestering kids at the bus stop. Then, he started attacking joggers and skateboarders and preventing people from leaving their own homes.

Eventually, the police were called in. After he eluded their capture for a couple of weeks, he was, says the Andover police chief "euthanized."

We're talking, of course, about one bad bird – a turkey, in fact, that harassed people in the Dufton Road area.

Wild turkeys have been showing their feathers in several new Andover neighborhoods this year, including some near the downtown and state highways. Residents say that the longer the turkeys stay, the more aggressive they become, sometimes terrorizing young children, or producing scenes appropriate for America's Funniest Home Videos, the Thanksgiving edition.

While rain, sleet and snow may be no match for the US Postal Service, Theda Leonard says she's seen a turkey near her Tanglewood Way house delay mail standing at this point."

Pastor astonished by support

"I was kind of astonished. I would say three-fourths of the congregation raised their hands," said Ellis. "I became very emotional.

"It was definitely the right thing to do," he said. "By that applause, the voice of the people came through loud and clear."

The applause lasted more than a minute, and sustained applause would follow at each Mass on Sunday when the letter was read by a priest. "Certainly, it was a representative audience because no one knew that was going to happen," said Dow. "It's quite indicative of the people in general – at least those who are still going to Mass."

A meeting with fellow priests

Ellis was one of three St. Augustine priests, along with Rev. Harry Erdlen and Rev. Rick Piatt, to sign the letter which praised Law for much of the good work he had done, but also "with a heavy heart" asked for his resignation as "a necessary step that must be taken if healing is to come."

The priests' decision came after a week in which further documents were released showing Law's handling of other priests accused of sexual misconduct.

It also came after Ellis and Erdlen met with dozens of priests from the Greater Boston area to talk about the Promise for Tomorrow campaign, designed to raise money for a variety of church programs.

The clergy all believed the campaign was for just and worthy causes, but believed the timing was ill-advised, given parishioners' feelings surrounding the crisis. Talk soon turned to how stressful the priests in the Boston Archdiocese were finding their jobs.

Normally, to become the pastor of a congregation is the crowning moment of a priest's career. But one priest, nervous about his health, said, "I'm ready to say, 'Here are the keys,'" according to Ellis.

"Once you hear all of that, you become sort of energized. You just feel for these men who are so dedicated," he said. "It came to, should we write the cardinal a letter?"

The letter was drafted and later sent by e-mail to Ellis, who decided to read it to those attending his Saturday evening Mass. People lined up after the Mass to speak with Ellis and he said the response was "extremely positive and emotional."

"There seemed to be more (people) than usual that stopped and thanked him and showed their support for what they all recognized was an ordeal, a difficult experience for him to go through," said Dow.

"They were very grateful. It was almost like their voice was being made public and there was gratitude that someone was speaking for them in an official capacity," said Ellis.

Even after leaving the Mass, affirming calls and e-mails continued. This response, said Ellis, was "not only unusual, I would say phenomenal. I've never experienced anything like it.

Ellis said he signed the letter because he believes it is best for the Catholic Church. One of St. Augustine's teachings is that the common good is more important than any individual, he said.

"I would say the common good, being the people, comes before the good of the individual, in this case, the cardinal. We need to heal and see that justice is served," he said.

Ellis said he hoped the stand taken by the priests would encourage people who have become frustrated with the church to return.

Some local Catholics eye more change

■ MORE TO DO

Doyle. "I bet Andover has more (priests who signed the letter requesting Cardinal Law's resignation) than anybody. That says that your parishes are moving in a unified way to bring reforms within the church."

Andover priests who signed the letter are Rev. Alfred Ellis, Rev. Harry Erdlen and Rev. Rick Piatt of St. Augustine, and Rev. Scott Ness and Rev. James Wenzel of St. Ambrose Friary.

Whether the letter is the salve needed to soothe the scandal-created wounds remains to be seen, but the majority of St. Augustine parishioners have reacted positively to the letter. In addition, VOTF affiliate members continue to laud the local church for its dealings with members.

"Regardless of what happens, all of this has brought us together in a feeling of fellowship," said Paul Dow, a member of both St. A's pastoral council and its VOTF affiliate.

"What I hope is the future direction will show a coming together of all parishioners and a more active interest in the works of the pastoral council and the works of Voice of the Faithful. There's overlapping membership in the two groups," he says.

For his part, Ellis, the pastor who signed the letter, hopes his and his fellow Andover priests' decision will encourage people to return to the parish. The effect of the scandal can be seen by viewing the collection plates.

> "There has to be change because there has been such abuse of power."
> EILEEN HESPELER, MEMBER OF THE ST. AUGUSTINE AFFILIATE OF VOICE OF THE FAITHFUL

"It's not a secret by any means that ever since this scandal broke the parish (was) down $40,000 in the offertory collection by the end of June," said Ellis.

He said he hoped people would now see that "we do understand." He was surprised by the level of reaction he received after reading the letter at his first weekend Mass.

"People were yearning and wanting to hear something, and they heard it," he said. "(They seemed to feel as if) we finally 'got it,' as it were."

"We certainly applaud the efforts of our priests, and Father Al had been very supportive," said Gilbert.

Next step for VOTF

The fact that there is a VOTF affiliate at St. Augustine has kept some people involved in the parish.

"If I wasn't involved in Voice of the Faithful through this last week, with all these papers being released, I don't think I could still be Catholic," said Eileen Hespeler, who runs the national VOTF Web site. "No way."

"VOTF gives people an arena to talk about their faith and how upset they are," she said.

Hespeler said she is one of three Andover residents among the approximately 125 statewide VOTF members who expected to vote Wednesday, after Townsman deadline, on whether the group should call on Law to resign.

VOTF members are careful to note that their group has never called for Law's resignation before. But Hespeler predicted that VOTF members would support that decision now (see related brief, page 3).

"Before, not everybody would have voted for it. That (recent change) is because of the documents that have been released this last week," she said.

But Hespeler wants to see more changes than just a new cardinal. She wants an active pastoral council, peopled with a cross-section of parishioners, in each parish to advise the pastors. She sees VOTF continuing to help drive change from within the church.

"For VOTF, we are going to be involved in a membership drive. The more people we have, the more the bishops will have to listen to us. There has to be change because there has been such an abuse of power. VOTF is going to facilitate that," said Hespeler.

Your Dental Health
by Richard D. Hopgood, D.M.D., F.A.G.D.

EARLY WARNING

According to the American Dental Association, an increase in sugar consumption among children is causing a rise in tooth decay. With this in mind, parents should make every effort to schedule an appointment with the dentist as soon as the child's first tooth appears. The problem is that a recent survey by the American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry found that 70% of American children start receiving dental care two years too late, most often at age three. As a result, children who might otherwise get their first cavities at age six are now getting cavities before age three. When this happens, a real disservice is being done to the child. As far as dental care goes, the earlier the better.

Regardless of age or gender, everyone can benefit from preventive dental care. Time and again, experience proves it is to your advantage to take the time for your oral health, or that of your child, no matter how busy your personal or professional schedule. A few minutes spent each day on your teeth can save on future dental visits. Nothing is more economical than regular dental checkups, so please let us help you take care of your dental health. please call 978-475-2431 for an appointment at 296 Lowell Street (Rt 133), with easy access off Rt. 93

P.S. Even before your child's first tooth erupts, take a soft, damp washcloth and gently wipe his or her gums after eating or drinking sugary liquids.

IN BRIEF

Three residents involved in Voice vote

Eileen Hespeler and Emilie Gilbert of St. Augustine Parish, and Joanne Nowack of St. Robert's of Andover are three of the Voice of the Faithful members who were expected to vote on Wednesday, Dec. 11, after Townsman deadline, on whether VOTF should:

• call on Cardinal Law to resign;

• ask the Pope to acknowledge that the archdiocese exists without the pastoral leadership of a bishop and appoint a personal of suitable pastoral and moral character; and

• call on Bishop Gregory and the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops to act on their commitment to bishops' accountability by acting with respect to the situation in Boston.

Gilbert, head of the Voice of the Faithful chapter at St. Augustine in Andover, said she will support the resolutions at the meeting in Newton. "Cardinal Law has demonstrated an inability to manage or be responsible to the Catholic faithful, in particular the most innocent, the Catholic children," Gilbert said.

Joanne Nowak, head of the Voice of the Faithful affiliate at St. Robert Bellarmine Church in Andover, said about half of the VOTF members responded to an e-mail survey on the resolutions, and only one was opposed.

"I'm pleased," Nowak said. "I feel very strongly we are without a moral leader. It has not helped in the healing process that he has remained as our bishop."

Whither the seniors?

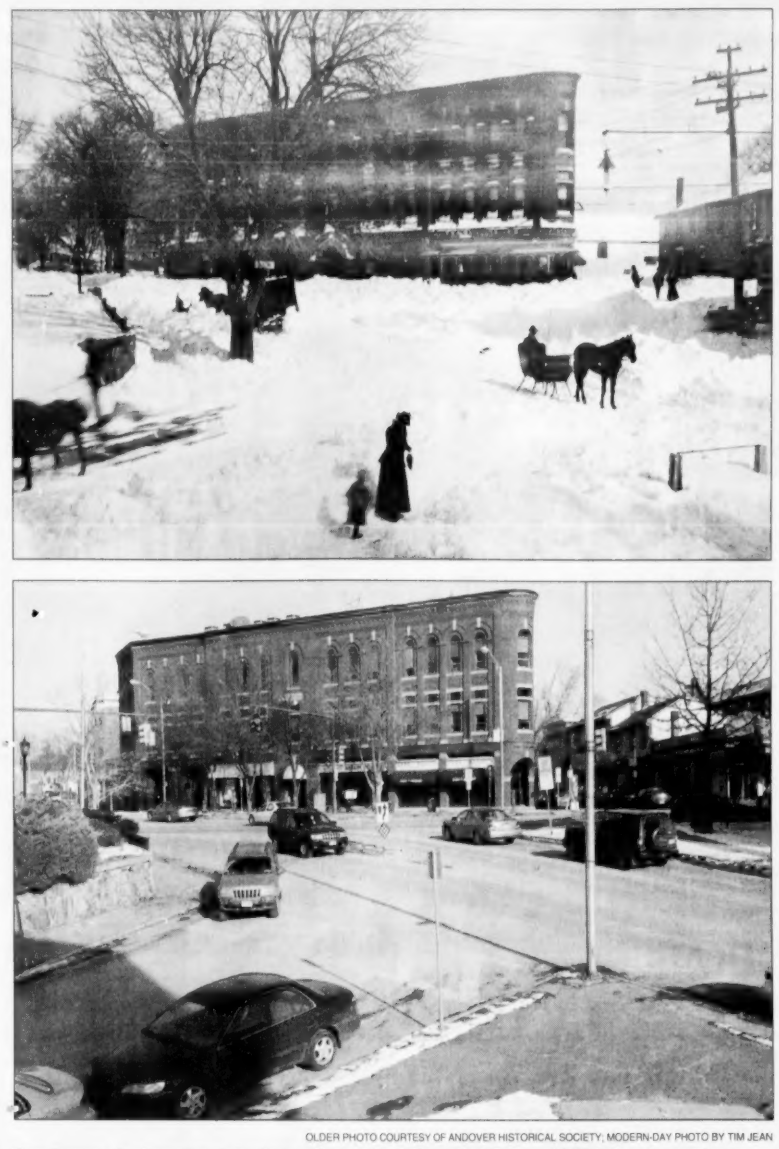

The Senior Center Task Force will have a public hearing to discuss pros and cons of two possible sites at the senior center at 7 p.m. on Dec. 17.

Survey says...senior needs

By Dinah Kay Cardin

What can be done to improve the lives of Andover's aging population?

A survey provided by the Council on Aging just might provide the answers. The survey's results, to be released at the beginning of 2003, are expected to shed light on a variety of needs for better senior services. Elder Services Director Jeanne Madden expects a senior center to be a top priority. The current senior center, a resource for preventative health care, nutritious meals and social interaction for Andover seniors, simply cannot meet the growing needs of the community, especially when 10,000 residents are estimated to be over age 60 in the next five years, she said .

The survey has been widely distributed so far, according to Marlies Zammuto, chairwoman of the Council on Aging. It has been handed out at community meetings and events, and distributed through Andover High School's newsletter and a community canvassing.

"Anybody really has access to them and we're hoping people of all ages, not just seniors, document their opinion about these issues, because with any luck we'll all be seniors some day," she said.

The survey asks open-ended questions, Zammuto said, challenging people to fully explain their opinions and advice on the most significant issues facing seniors in the community.

"I don't have expectations. I'm being completely open-minded to this. I don't want to assume anything," she said. "I feel it's really important for people to express what's on their mind without any predetermined answers."

But according to Madden, many will probably answer with complaints about the current senior center.

"We can't meet the need with the current space and the need is growing," said Madden, adding that during mid-afternoon on Tuesday, multiple classes and activities filled the building to the max. "The space isn't appropriate for what we do," she said.

Some senior classes and meetings held by the Council on Aging have been moved off-site due to limited space, she said. She also cited as a problem the lack of space to sit or stand when groups load and unload buses.

The center is regarded as a support network for many, said Madden, often becoming a meeting place, where people become close and then begin to help each other.

"This is a total flexible place," she said. "We have to be able to respond to whatever comes in the door and to every phone call."

While a new senior center is needed, said Martin Epstein, a member of the Council on Aging, a new center cannot take care of all the needs of the community.

He hopes the survey will allow those to speak up who have problems with affordable housing, with finances in general or who need information about tax-relief programs, Meal on Wheels, or an illness support group.

Though Andover residents may, on the whole, be wealthier than the state average, said Madden, people in Andover face the same issues as in any community. "People need access to information, access to health care and transportation," she said. "They need to be able to afford their housing, whether you have a mortgage or are paying rent. They need access to socialization, which is the main thing you can do to stay well."

"To stay healthy and independent, that's the main function of the senior center," she said.

■ TURKEYS

service by not allowing the truck near a mail box. Another time it charged her neighbor.

"It charged him, leaping for his back, trying to scratch him with his talons. It was like a little Jackie Chan move," she laughs. That same afternoon, her son had to distract the turkey so she could get into her car.

"He chased my six-foot five-inch son into the house. Then the turkey was outside, glaring at him," she says. "He really seems to want to assert his authority and resents that we want to claim ownership of his houses. It was just hysterical, him being so upset that we would try to lead our own lives."

While residents find turkeys in their neighborhood amusing at first, most begin to see a downside quickly. Dufton Road's Kelly Atwood says residents named a block party after their bird. But, because someone began feeding it, she says, it became aggressive, attacking kids and adults at a school-bus stop.

"My poor daughter just started kindergarten and she would have nightmares. She didn't want to go on the bus," she said.

One day, a bird chased Atwood and her children around her house, around her Jeep and then back into the house. She was trapped until a neighbor distracted it. "Now that he's gone, it's a lot more peaceful around here," she says.

At times, wild turkeys have chased children – and parents – from bus stops.

"He had almost a routine. You could tell when he was coming," says Donna Hajj, of Enmore Street. "You could count on him coming down the street at a certain time." He would go to all the houses and sit on each lawn. Then he'd approach a certain house. "He always flew up on the garage. Then he flew up on the house. Then he'd be up in the tree for the night. In the morning, he'd be back at the bus stop."

Helen "Skip" Eccles, Brookfield Road, had a "bold" turkey in her yard this week, and also near the intersection of Elm Street and Route 125, close to the "Welcome to Andover" sign.

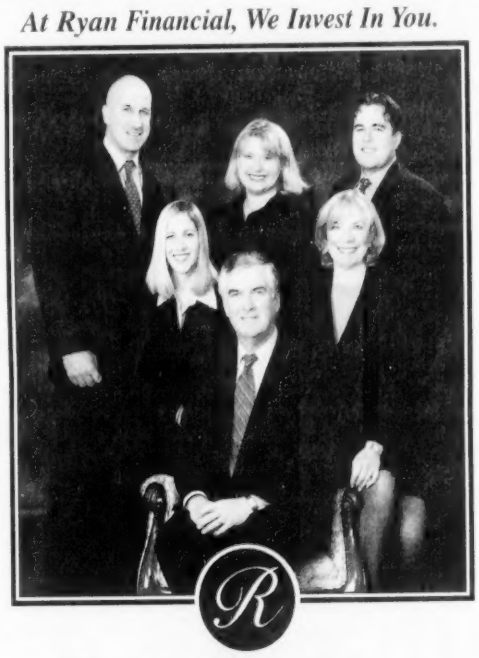

Eccles has been in town since 1956. Leonard has been here since 1965. Atwood and Hajj are also long-time residents. None of them have ever seen a turkey near their home before this year. Each points to nearby construction as a possible reason for the birds' appearance. Like others, Police Chief Brian Pattullo believes construction in Andover is causing wildlife to find new locations in town to roost.

"The other thing we used to have that we don't have anymore is hunting," says Pattullo. He says the town has seen a growth in car accidents involving wild animals in the past few years, noting that three or four police cruisers have collided with deer.

Pattullo advises people not to feed wild animals, or leave pet food outside.

2002 election

Numbers don't lie: Those with the biggest war chests win

By Ben Hellman

November election winners had their opponents financially outgunned.

That was the story in all three Andover state races.

Sen. Susan Tucker raised more than double her opponent

Campaign finance reports, filed last month with the state show Sen. Sue Tucker raised more than twice the money of her opponent, Maria Marasco. Meanwhile, newly-elected state representative Barbara L'Italien raised three times as much money as the second-place finisher in that race. The bulk of it came from her own pocketbook. Of $45,602, L'Italien kicked in $31,000 from her own pocket to help win the new 18th Essex District seat.

Her victory prompted the last-place finisher, Alfred DePietro of Georgetown to say political races are all about the money as he raised much less money than L'Italien.

State Rep. Barry Finegold of Andover said he pretty much agrees. If you really want to win, you do need money to pull it off, he said.

"When I first ran, I had to use a lot of my own money," he said. "It's like starting your own business. You put your own skin into it."

But he also said money is not the sole ticket to winning a campaign. "You have to knock on a lot of doors and be willing to work hard," he said. "And, you also need shoe polish and a good pair of shoes."

Here is a closer look at how much local politicians raised through Oct. 18, the last filing date before the election:

• Tucker raised $45,956, compared to opponent Maria Marasco's $21,086

• L'Italien raised $45,602 while her nearest challenger Kathy Sachs collected $15,351

• Finegold, who didn't have an opponent after the primary, raised $33,000. Democrat Michael Frishman of Andover, who ran unsuccessfully against Finegold in the primary, raised less than $3,240, opting out of electronic filing.

Rep. Barry Finegold raised $33,000, and did not face a challenger in the general election

The winners' donations came from individuals, unions, and political action committees (PACs), many around Andover.

The winners spent money on everything from rent and electricity for their offices to campaign contributions to other Democrats. Tucker made donations to Challenge Unlimited, the Bread & Roses Heritage Committee and Clean Water Action.

Finegold made donations to other candidates, including Shannon O'Brien, Christopher Gabrieli, Steve Grossman, and Barbara L'Italien. As part of his reported campaign spending, he bought $520 in event tickets to the Andona Society, Dahlia Ball and Andover Firemen's Relief Association.

Tucker received more than 450 individual contributions to her campaign, according to the campaign finance report. Many town leaders were among her contributors. They are: Superintendent Claudia Bach, School Committee chairwoman Tina Girdwood. School committee members Skip Eccles and Gerry Gustus, and selectmen chairman Ray Hender contributed $100 or less while town moderator Jim Doherty contributed $300.

Tucker also received contributions from businesses – via company owners and through company's PACs. John O'Connor, who listed himself as an executive of Cyr Construction, contributed $200. Thomas Patenaude, owner Bradford Glen Construction, contributed $250.

Rep. Barbara L'Italien raised about three times as much as her nearest opponent.

PACs representing Raytheon, Beer Distributors, Mass. Bankers, Mass. Hospital Association and New Car Automobile Dealers were some of the committees to make contributions.

Youth center 'perk' planned

Chandler Road site to remind some of Chandler Bing

By Ethan Forman

The town's new youth center will share the look and feel of the hit NBC show Friends when it opens, possibly in the spring of 2004.

In the sitcom, friends Monica, Chandler, Ross, Rachel, Phoebe and Joey hang out at Central Perk, a New York City cafe. They sit on oversized couches and put their feet up on low coffee tables.

The center's lounge will have a similar feel.

""The kids worked with us extensively so that it would be modeled after the set of Friends," said architect Joel Bargmann of Bargmann Hendrie and Archetype Inc. of Boston, the firm that designed the award-winning youth center in North Andover.

The lounge will have low coffee tables, he said, where kids can put up their feet and relax. The students will watch a big screen TV and shoot pool and play ping pong.

So far, $2.5 million of the $4.4 million needed to build the 30,000-square foot center has been raised, said Larry L. Larsen, a member of the nonprofit Andover Youth Foundation and former selectman.

Bids for the project could be solicited as early as February, Bargmann said, with work starting in spring. Construction should take about a year.

The center will boast a large gym, a "big room" that can seat 250 people for a banquet or hold 800 kids for a dance and a concession stand. There will be space to practice music, study or work out.

The center is being built on six acres of town-owned land adjacent to the West Andover Fire Station. The Andover Youth Foundation is raising the money to build it.

The center will be named for residents Yvon and Noella Cormier, the owners of Cormier Construction Corp., who donated $1.5 million toward the project.

Remembering Alex at Andover High

Banner honoring fallen friend to be unveiled by basketball team

By Judy Wakefield

When the Andover High School girls basketball teams take on Central Catholic High School Tuesday, Dec. 17, a memorial banner will be unveiled.

Alexandra Miliotis – Banner to honor her

The banner is in memory of Alexandra Miliotis, an Andover High student who died of cancer last March. She was a sophomore.

A terrific athlete, Alexandra was a three-sport star and had many friends at Andover High, including many on the girls varsity basketball team.

When that team earned top honors in their conference last season and earned varsity jackets, the girls decided to do something in Alex's memory instead of buying team jackets. They donated the money to buy the banner.

"It's a great big banner with many colors representing all the teams in the conference. And, it has a dedication line at the bottom in honor of Alex," said Alex's mother, Patti Miliotis.

Patti said Andover High does a great job remembering Alex. As a result of all the money that has been donated in Alex's memory, the Alexandra Miliotis Foundation has been formed. The group is getting busy planning various projects to keep Alex's memory alive.

Tuesday's game is the home opener for the Andover girls junior varsity and varsity basketball teams. The JV game starts at 6 p.m. while the varsity squad plays at 7:30 p.m. The banner will be unveiled between games.

Opinion

Don't feed the animals

THERE'S SOMETHING about the appearance of a turkey in one's neighborhood – or perhaps just the physical appearance of the turkey itself – that makes people laugh. Perhaps because of this, some well-meaning people feed the wild animals as if they were pets, or smaller birds.

Police Chief Brian Pattullo says this is a mistake. As residents of several neighborhoods in town can relate, once wild turkeys no longer see the need to avoid humans, they can become quite aggressive, ripping up lawns, pecking at little children and protecting their territory by chasing people away.

As Theda Leonard chuckled about a turkey in her neighborhood: "He really seems to want to assert his authority and resents that we want to claim ownership of his houses."

Translation: Want a pet bird? Get a parakeet. But don't feed the turkeys. The joke gets old quickly.

As Andover continues to grow, there will be fewer places for wild animals such as deer, turkeys, opossums and coyotes to live. They will bump into Andover residents more frequently – or be struck by cars. Residents should not do anything to encourage these animals to believe that our busiest neighborhoods – populated with children and pets who could be harmed – are their homes.

Web question

A turkey of a query: What should be done when bird meets man?

Last week's Townsman Web-site question could not be posted because of a technical error.

This week's Web question:

What should be done about Andover's turkey invasion?

The pesky birds are terrorizing young children and forcing residents to stay indoors. One local woman said a wild turkey in her yard had "a little Jackie Chan move" it used to attack a resident. What do you think?

• Turkeys are wildlife and should be able to roam around town as they please.

• The root of the problem seems to be construction. Turkeys are being forced to find new places to roost. Developers should take responsibility and find new roosting areas for the turkeys.

•Andover Police Department has euthanized at least one town turkey and should continue to do so.

• Allow hunting again in Andover.

• Other.

Set sights on future tonight

Editor, Townsman:

Dear Citizens of Andover:

Tonight, Thursday, Dec. 12 at 7 p.m. at the West Middle School, residents have an opportunity to help shape Andover's future. This evening's title, "The Sky's the Limit," may not sound too practical, but its purpose, to capture the hopes and dreams of our citizens, is the first step that will lead to a vision statement for Andover.

To make purposeful decisions, community leaders and public servants, such as myself, need a clear understanding of what residents value. We need to be given a strong sense of how the community envisions its future.

Building the community that Andover people dream of is not something that happens by accident. It requires citizen input to create some sort of agreement about the community's values. Sure there are tensions and conflicting values, but acknowledging them, and finding the goals and values everyone shares is key. A vision statement based on that agreement helps to guide decisions about land use, schools, the environment and other important issues.

Who will decide the future of Andover: citizens acting through their local government, or persons and/or groups acting in their own interests? With a strong vision statement, Andover's values will then be an integral consideration in every decision that local government is called upon to make; therefore allowing all special interest groups to participate by working within the context of the vision.

It is time for Andover people to think about the decisions that their elected officials make and figure out how together everyone can continue to build a quality community by choice and not by chance. By helping the Vision 21 Committee to create a vision statement, residents can help to ensure that the future, whatever it may hold, delivers lasting benefits for them.

Cuts must be shared; arts as valuable as other areas

Editor, Townsman:

On a recent Friday, I read to a class of first-graders at the new High Plain Elementary School. What an alert, responsive group of about 20 kids they were. When we reached the end of the little book, I asked why they were learning to read. The first answer was "that's what you do in first grade," but after that their answers were remarkably thoughtful. "It helps you to learn by yourself"; "You find out about places far away"; "It helps you learn about other people"; "it's for your imagination"; and maybe the best answer was "Because it's fun." I couldn't help noticing that they listened to what each other had to say – they were respectful of one another. Clearly Ms. Puleo is a warm and effective teacher. I enjoyed my session, and came away with high hopes for the coming generation.

That evening I went to Andover High School to see Les Miserables. It was a challenging undertaking and they all did a wonderful job. I was particularly impressed with the number of students involved: a cast of more than 70, an orchestra of 20 and a technical support staff of more than 30 students. The demanding singing parts were divided among many students who showed a remarkable array of talent, and the enthusiasm of the choral participants was unmistakable.

It was also evident from the program that a large group of parents and teachers played an important role, and director Susan Sepich deserves special note. At the end of the evening those involved were rewarded by a long standing ovation from a most appreciative audience. A fine production like this contributes immensely to the health of the community.

The coming year is going to be financially challenging for the town in general and the schools in particular. There will be great pressure to cut education costs by slashing money for the arts. We must not allow this to happen.

When cuts must be made, they must be shared by all academic disciplines – and I say this as a long-time math teacher. It's equally clear that the necessary cuts must be shared throughout the school department and throughout all town departments.

Andover High's production of Les Miserables is a shining example of the importance of the arts in education in Andover. Surely this production will have lasting impact on all the kids who participated. But it also helps us to realize that our support of the arts is a crucial element in determining what kind of a community we choose to live in.

Musical shows value of nurturing arts in young people

Editor, Townsman:

We would like to congratulate the cast, crew, directors, and orchestra for Andover High School's performance of Les Miserables. We attended all four performances and never grew tired of hearing those young voices or listening to the orchestra play. Many in the audience returned for a second show and the last two performances contained more than 1,100 people, nearly filling the house.

The credit goes to many for the professional performances by these young actors, actresses and musicians. Rehearsals didn't just begin 10 weeks before opening night. Members of the fine arts department support and mentor these young men and women, beginning in elementary school. Other organizations also create endeavors that showcase their talent. As members of a theater family in town, we appreciate that they show children another avenue that demonstrates cooperation, teamwork and good showmanship.

As parents of a student at Doherty Middle School, we worry about the recent cuts. Our son was fortunate enough to be one of "the little people" in Les Miserables. We have heard about the impact of doing away with in-school instrumental music instruction and how it will cause a lack of future band and orchestra members. There have been cuts to the choral department as well. There is no longer a jazz, audition-based ensemble at Andover High. Last year the group received the highest award in its category in New York City, under the direction of Carol Prasad. Students can sing on key with one another because of years of practice.

We want these opportunities to continue for our son. We must talk about how we can prevent further cuts and restore items to the budget. The arts are a healthy alternative for young people and they remain our greatest commodity in town. We must continue to nurture young talent.

LETTERS

High praise

Editor, Townsman:

I have been telling my friends about this for the past few weeks, and one suggested I write this letter, as my passion and fervor for this has not seemed to wane.

I am referring to the Andover High School's recent production of Les Miserables. Having been a musician and lover of the performing arts all my life, I had seen Les Miserables on several occasions, on Broadway and in Boston. My daughter and I attended this performance out of support for the kids, and almost as much out of curiosity, as it is a difficult musical score to play and a large-scale, long performance even for professionals.

I am writing to tell you what we got to see was nothing short of astounding.

When Les Mis is performed professionally, the theater has to be modified extensively to support the unique rotating turntable staging, and multi-level set. This group constructed this extensive staging at the high school for a mere four-performance run.

Prior to seeing the production, I had spoken to Doug Halsted, the show's producer, on how this rendition would differ from the full production. He had told me a few minor differences. While Halsted was very animated and excited with how strong the kids were in this show, I still came to my seat on Saturday night with what I felt to be the appropriately-lowered expectations of a high-school attempt.

All I can say is if this theater group was the football team, they could compete at a national level, and NFL scouts would have already contacted many of them. I immediately sought out Halsted after the production and teased him about having "ringers" in this show. The stage presence, depth of character, and vocal performances were unabashedly professional. I have paid Broadway prices in the past and not heard better vocal performances. Dale Spollett's "Bring Him Home" was as good a rendition as I have ever heard – and this boy is 16! I had asked if they had lowered the key that Cosette's part was written in, as it requires an operatic soprano. Halsted laughed and said no. I then sat open-mouthed as I heard Lynette Toomey sing this as if it had been written for her. As someone said in the lobby, "there was nothing 'high school' about this show." The thunderous standing ovation the cast received came from an audience that realized they had witnessed something rare. I firmly believe that 20 years from now I will wistfully relate the story of having seen a now famous performer as a child in a high-school production. My hat's off to director Susan Sepich and team.

If I may get political for a moment, Andover voters who question the value of programs for music and the performing arts should know there is no finer example of tax dollars at work. They have helped to create an all-star team.

The bad news is this production was for four performances here and is now history; the great news is most of these performers were not seniors. We are blessed with an amazingly rare crop of talented kids, some of whom I have no doubt people will one day pay handsomely to see on Broadway. My strong advice is to watch for their next production and take advantage of the opportunity to witness these budding talents. My family plans to be camping outside the box office.

Music and celebrating the holidays in America

Editor, Townsman:

When we arrived in the United States 10 years ago from Russia, my family and I had a lot of difficulty at first. We had to learn English and American traditions and culture. Any culture is connected with the language. The two can exist only together. But we overcame this problem and now can say that we know the most important thing for us: celebrating America's holidays. I want to share my happiness with seeing the American tradition of families getting together on holidays. And I want to tell how my family gets together on Thanksgiving and Hanukkah.

We have the opportunity to celebrate holidays here because we live in a wonderful country where everybody has equal right to do what he or she wants to.

Forgive me if I start imaging my little daughter, Svetlana, playing piano 50 years ago in Russia. She attended two schools at the same time: a middle school six days a week, and a music school three times a week. She was an A student in both schools. Later, at age 13, she entered a music college. I remember the concerts and exams at the music college and conservatory. After graduating, Svetlana worked as a music teacher for 25 years in Russia. Her students were very high-level, classical musicians.

When we arrived in America in 1992, my daughter couldn't find a job at first. She went to the Northern Essex Community College to study English, and worked different jobs including at Phillips Academy as a pianist in the ballet class. Finally, she became a music teacher for people of all ages, at home and at the Le Studio de Ballet in Andover. Her success in music makes me very happy – and I think it makes others happy, too.

When my family gets together, we have a concert. I once played guitar and now my granddaughter, Senia, also plays guitar. She is a president of a company in Boston but attended music clubs. My other granddaughter, Lilia, plays piano. She is an office manager in Andover but loves music very much. My grandson Vlad use to be a music teacher in Russia. In America he is a computer specialist, but he has some students in his trombone class. Vlad works now as a truck driver because he lost his job. He plays both the trombone and the piano. My son-in-law, Yefim, has a very nice voice and my son, Zak, plays accordion and piano. He is a financial consultant in Connecticut now, but he plays accordion often at home. My daughter-in-law, Zina, is a very good dancer. My family gets together on Thanksgiving and Hanukkah and we have our family concert.

In my opinion, music makes the world nicer and triumphal. In different situations, we need some music. It makes everybody happy. If it is possible, all parents should think about music education for their children.

TOWN TALK

Tie-ing it on at this Pike birthday bash

Let's face it. Everybody has part of their job that they don't like. Pike's head of school is no different.

For John "Muddy" Waters, it's the dress code. He doesn't like wearing a tie every day, but the job requires it.

Fit to be tied – Muddy Waters

He's accepted it and works hard to have fun with it. He may be the top guy at a private school, but there's no basic preppie red or navy ties in his wardrobe. Rather, it's more like the hockey-player-covered tie he was wearing earlier this week when the Townsman dropped by. Like many Andover parents, he is a rink rat as one son plays college hockey, another son skates for Brooks School, and his daughter plays for the local Top Gun hockey league.

Last week, Pike students had even more fun when just about every one of them – boys and girls – showed up wearing ties in honor of Waters' 50th birthday.

The sea of ties greeted him all day long, making it a birthday to remember.

Nutcracker a holiday must for local families

Holiday time is Nutcracker season, and last weekend's showing at the Rogers Center for Performing Arts at Merrimack College is just one that proves how popular the event is for local families.

The New England Civic Ballet had five shows; all were sold out and 25 extra seats were brought in for the Saturday matinee to handle an overflow crowd. With a seating capacity of 600 at the Rogers Center, that works out to some 3,000 people seeing the show.

The dance group has booked the first weekend in December through 2005 at the Rogers Center.

"I would have booked even further ahead, but they didn't have a calendar," said NECB's artistic director Phyllis George. "So many families are making us a part of their holiday tradition. It's great."

Demand is such that a list of patrons interested in tickets for next year's show has already started, she said. Those tickets will go on sale in September.

Two other dance companies – Dance Prism and Albany Berkshire Ballet – also perform The Nutcracker in Andover at holiday time.

There's no way to tell how many folks from Andover attended the shows. But The Nutcracker is a sure-fire hit and makes money for these dance companies. Andover always has a soft spot for the sugar plum fairy and crew.

Clamoring for Liberty

It won't be a silent night at the J. Everett Collins Center for the Performing Arts tomorrow.

The United States Air Force Band of Liberty is coming to perform its holiday show on Friday, Dec. 13, at 7 p.m. in the Collins Center at Andover High School. The popular band has made several appearances in town during the past several years, and has been well received. But most residents have never seen its holiday program.

"They're booked so far in advance it's difficult to get them," says John Doherty, veterans agent. "The Christmas program is probably what they do best. I've seen the program."

Admission is free. As of Townsman deadline, there were some tickets left, and people seeking ticket information can contact the veterans services office at 978-623-8218.

Politicians take Andover-North Andover League of Women Voters' lobbying very seriously

THEY HAVE A "DEMOCRACY IS NOT a spectator sport" attitude. Their political positions are taken very seriously. And they love grassroots politics and the respect their opinions receive.

They're members of the nonpartisan Andover-North Andover League of Women Voters.

At their holiday pot luck dinner, held last Wednesday night at Addison Gallery, the mood was somewhat lighter than usual due to the holidays. But political and lobbying concerns were by no means put aside. The no-nonsense guest speaker was Madhu Sridhar, who cut her teeth as Andover-North Andover League of Women Voters president and is now a vice-president with the statewide chapter.

"Respected legislators know very well who we are," Sridhar said proudly. "Seasoned legislators know we are serious when our position is brought forward on something. We lobby for important issues and gain respect and credibility... and, that respect is earned."

Sridhar, who served as president of the local chapter from 1996 to 1998, said the group does not sit on the sidelines while policy is made. Rather, it gets down and dirty on important issues, and such work keeps and attracts interested members.

Current co-president Liz Richter said membership stands at about 150. The group is overwhelmingly female, but men are allowed to join. The local chapter has three male members, including Michael Frishman of Andover.

In 1991, the Andover League merged with North Andover's League. Their board meets monthly and the group hosts public meetings along with "meet the legislators" events in an effort to get the public more involved with government workings and politics.

The League's history in Andover dates back to the suffrage movement, when spouses at Phillips Academy banded together to take positions on various issues, Richter said. Andover has sustained a League ever since.

SCOUT NEWS

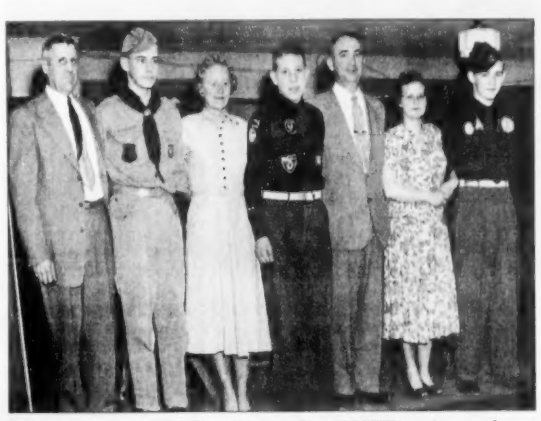

Two local boys earn Eagle Scout rank

AFTER EARNING 21 MERIT BADGES each and performing a community service project that involved more than 100 hours of work from Scouts, parents and other volunteers, Benjamin Osgood Hoerner and Alexander Louis Vispoli received the highest honor in the Boy Scouts of America, the Eagle Scout Award, Nov. 9 in a Court of Honor at Ballardvale United Church.

Troop 76 Scoutmaster Don Milligan was also honored on his 50th anniversary of receiving his Eagle Scout Award.

Hoerner's service project involved clearing overgrowth from the Pavilion and Berry Pond areas on Salem Street in Harold Parker State Forest to beautify these areas, promote public safety and allow entry to a state-funded, handicapped-accessible nature trail. After Hoerner had a false start on another project, he and Ranger Bruce Colburn inventoried the park's needs and identified those areas where a troop of Boy Scouts could have a major impact. Small trees and brush had overgrown each of these areas, and the Pavilion area in particular could not be policed. The parking area was closed and entry to a recently completed handicapped trail to Berry Pond was difficult. In the second phase of the project, views from benches in the Berry Pond area were improved. Hoerner supervised the Scouts, parents and leaders of Troop 76 and the Scouts of Troop 702 in Reading over two days to complete the project. Hoerner enlisted the support of a local restaurant to supply food for the workers, and a hardware store to subsidize their equipment. As a result of this project, the safety, accessibility and general usefulness of this resource became enhanced.

Before the Eagle Court of Honor, Hoerner was awarded a Green Seal Award from William Dunn of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs of Massachusetts in appreciation of his contribution to environmental conservation and public safety at Harold Parker State Forest.

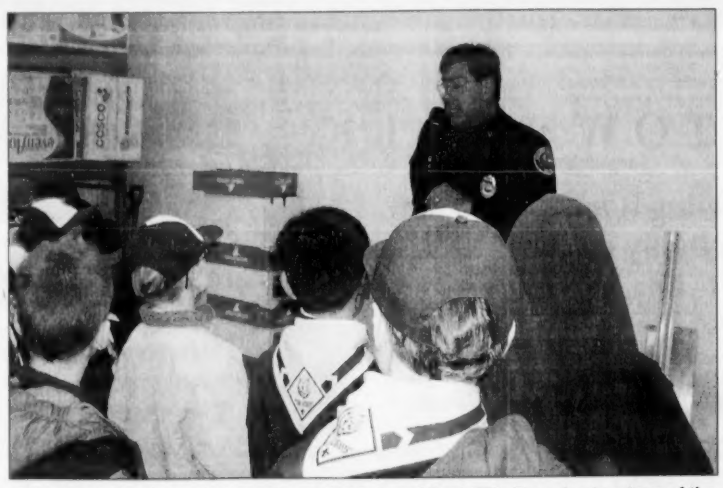

Vispoli's service project involved painting the upper floor (bedrooms, hallway, stairway, and banister) of Lazarus House, a homeless shelter in Lawrence.

A full review and approval of the project was conducted with Bridget Shaheen, Lazarus House executive director. The project was completed the weekend before Thanksgiving 2001. Many hours of prep work (sanding, spackling, priming and replacing hardware, such as switchplate covers) were needed to make the walls, moldings and stairway ready for painting, which took place over a two-day period. At the end of the first day, all the equipment had to be securely put away, all furniture had to be replaced to allow families to return by 4:30 p.m. The project improved the living conditions and lifted the spirits of the temporary residents in time for the holidays.

Vispoli organized and coordinated the group efforts, including the donation of paint and equipment, help from a professional painter, food from local restaurants, as well as strong troop involve-

SAFETY FIRST

Officer Bob Cronin treated members of Cub Scout Pack 77's Bear den to a tour of the new Safety Center last week. The visit was planned to help the Cub Scouts earn arrow point credits toward the Law Enforcement Achievement. To earn this rank, the Bears were required to visit their local police station and meet the police officer who patrols their neighborhood. Cronin led the Scouts through the new facility – from where the arrest-and-booking process takes place, through the new jail cell units, and ending in the squad room where Cronin explained gun safety (pictured above) and the proper use of dialing 9-1-1. The boys' favorite part of the new center is how the toilets are flushed outside the jail cell units – so only the attending officer can flush them. "Fortunately," organizers said, "the cells were unoccupied at the time of the visit."

On a recent trip to Camp Maude Eaton, the West High Plain Elementary Brownie Troop 417 earned their Girl Scout Ways Badge. They roasted S'mores and made a sit-upon out of shower curtains. In front, the girls (from left) are: Sarah Lerner, Samantha Beati, Jessica Dunne, Kelsey Stevens, Shawna Fox, and Kristina Terzakis. In back: Lauren Murtagh, Brynn Stevens, Micayla McQuade, Caitlin Clancy and Casey Roberts. Troop leaders are Erica Beati and Ellen Clancy.

Shawsheen Village Woman's Club members Betty Keefe, Rosemary Surrette and Betty Klaiman prepare to draw raffle winners at the club's scholarship bridge and luncheon last month at the United Methodist Church.

Transportation will be the focus of the Andover Historical Society's new winter Noontime Lecture Series. The next in the series will be Wednesday, Dec. 11 when Larry Lowenthal presents "Railroads in American Life" at noon. Bring a bag lunch and enjoy a relaxing, entertaining, and informative lunchtime program.

Lowenthal worked as a historian in the National Park Service's Boston office for many years. During that time, he developed plans and studies for existing parks, as well as proposals for new parks and heritage areas throughout the Northeast. Since retiring in 1999, Lowenthal has worked as an active historical consultant and author. He has written many books and articles on railroads, canals, military history, and other topics. His latest, Titanic Railroad, the story of New England's last "railroad war," was published in 1998. "Railroads in American Life" is Lowenthal's first lecture at the Historical Society.

Upcoming Noontime Lecture Series topics include "Canals as Early Transportation" on Jan. 22, and "The Streetcar Comes to Massachusetts" March 12.

Additional lectures will be added, with topics to be announced, organizers said.

For more information about the Noontime Lecture Series, call 978-475-2236, or visit the Web site at www.andhist.org.

The Greater Lawrence Habitat for Humanity announced it will hold a dedication ceremony to celebrate the completion of its first "House That Faith Built" at 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 15, at the new home site at 6-8 Melrose Court in Lawrence. The dedication will be led by the Rev. Dr. Calvin Mutti, senior pastor of South Church in Andover, and the Rev. Esther Rendon-Thompson, associate pastor of West Parish Church. According to the Rev. Don Williamson, chairman of Habitat's Faith Relations Committee, more than 20 congregations participated in this effort, including Andover congregations and principal sponsors South Church and West Parish; the Parish of Christ Church; and Faith Lutheran Church.

For more information about this project or other Habitat efforts, contact Stephanie Harrington at the Habitat office at 978-681-8858, or visit the Web site www.habitatlawrence.org.

Richter explained that the group "shapes ideas" year in and year out.

"Legislators want to know the concerns and opinions at the grassroots level," she said. "That's what we do."

"We study issues first, talk about them and then form an opinion that will be presented," added Diana Walsh, also co-president.

Over the years, the group has presented numerous positions on a variety of topics, including positions on warrant items at Andover Town Meeting.

Sridhar likes to quote President Harry Truman when talking about the importance of her group in Andover.

"It's not the hand that signs the law," she said. "It's the hand that casts the vote that holds the destiny of America."

OBITUARIES

Mary S. Minard

Legendary Phillips, Abbot history teacher

Mary S. Minard, 65, who taught history and social science at Abbot Academy and Phillips Academy for 40 years, died Friday, Dec. 6, in Bridgton, Maine.

The popular history teacher grew up at Phillips Academy, where her father, Kenneth Minard, also taught history for 40 years. A 1955 graduate of Abbot Academy and a graduate of Smith College, she taught first at Abbot, chaired the history department there, then moved to PA upon the merger of the two academies in 1973. She retired in 2001.

Mary S. Minard

"Mary Minard represented the best and finest traditions of both schools – a wonderful combination of rigor and compassion in the classroom," says Victor Henningsen III, chair of the history and social science department.

According to a spokeswoman for Phillips Academy, Minard was respected by the faculty for her innovative pedagogy and her curricular development work in American and world history courses. She pioneered the introduction of service learning into the classroom in her urban studies elective for seniors, in which students conducted research on the streets of Lawrence as often as in the library.

Years earlier, she was instrumental in re-vitalizing the school's community service program, providing an array of opportunities for students to work with the disadvantaged. Most of these programs continue today, with 800 students a year participating in community service at Phillips Academy.

She also served as a dorm counselor for many years. "For her, the day did not end when classes were over," says Henningsen. "She was a good friend, a dedicated teacher and a forthright colleague. She cared deeply about Phillips and Abbot academies, and she modeled a commitment to service that was and will continue to be difficult to match."

Members of her family include her brother, Julian Minard of Chantilly, Va., and many family members, friends and students whose lives she touched. Her family will hold a small funeral at 1 p.m. today, Thursday, Dec. 12, at St. Joseph's Parish in Bridgton, Maine.

Arrangements are by the Wentworth Funeral Home, Bridgton. There will be a memorial service at Phillips Academy at a later date and one in Bridgton in July.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorial contributions be made to Bread and Roses, 58 Newbury St., Lawrence, MA 01840.

OBITUARIES

The Townsman will publish obituaries of Andover residents without charge.

The paper also will publish without charge a short announcement of those people who died and did not live here, but are related to someone who lives in Andover. This listing will include the name of the deceased, where he or she lived, when he or she died, and names of relatives in Andover.

Those who wish to have a complete obituary published about a person who did not live in Andover can pay for a death notice. The cost of a death notice depends on the length of the notice.

Questions? Call Jack Grady or Neil Fater at 978-475-7000.

The cases of boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 17 are dealt with in the Juvenile Court – bunking out, stealing automobiles, breaking and entering, stealing radio parts or pretty wearing apparel or other offenses against the social order. Summer camp returns to Pike

Fields, air-conditioning, computers – a mid-summer's daydream for kids

By Judy Wakefield

After a five-year absence, summer camp is returning to Pike School in Andover.

School officials previously had stopped offering summer programs because of construction work. But now that the school's Horne Building is complete, Pike staffers say they realize letting the school – which is air-conditioned – sit idle during the summer would be wasting a valuable community asset.

"We have fields, air-conditioning, and computers. And, there is a need out there," said Nancy Rullo, who is in charge of the summer program, called Club Pike. "We have done the research and it shows that parents will be interested."

There's no swimming pool on the Pike grounds, but there is plenty of running space as the grounds include four fields, and kids could cool off indoors thanks to the air-conditioning.

Summer tuition has not yet been determined, but plans call for a six-week summer program that runs from June 30 to Aug. 8. Each week will have a different theme. General interest courses and day trips connected to the theme will be offered. For example, a week focused on arts would include art projects and a day trip to a museum, Rullo said.

A new summer program at Pike School will offer computer classes to youngsters. Here, Pike ninth-grader Ben Clayman of Andover works on an iMac with summer program director Nancy Rullo.

Courses will be offered in the morning, while afternoons will include sports. Pike faculty will run the courses.

Camp hours are set for 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and extended day-care coverage will be available an hour before and two hours after camp.

Club Pike will be available for school-age kids, but campers don't have to be Pike students to attend. Kids from around Merrimack Valley will be welcome.

"I talk to many people in town and some of them don't know Pike is here," said John Waters. Pike head of school. "We are looking to be more visible."

Waters said a family-friendly and flexible summer camp, ideal for working parents, is just the ticket to positively raise the school's exposure.

Club Pike is looking to become as successful as some of the local popular summer camps for kids, such as Kaleidoscope and the summer camp at Brooks School. Those camps are known to fill quickly.

For more information on Club Pike, parents can check out the school's Web site, www.summertime@pikeschool.org.

TARGETING THE BUDGET

For schools: Larger classes, more fees?

■ BUDGET PROJECTIONS

People sat in small groups and brainstormed solutions to the financial impasse, with a number suggesting small money-raising schemes such as higher student parking fees at the high school. One group calculated that if two-thirds of families agreed to pay a voluntary $100 "enrichment fee," the school could raise $150,000. This year, the high school introduced a $100 fee for students who participate in athletic programs.

They were reluctant to cut into school programs, saying reductions approved last year had already reduced the high school to the bone.

Systemwide, the schools cut money for 17 staff people to meet last year's budget and then eliminated 22 more after Town Meeting rejected a tax override, school officials said. A number of teachers and other staff took split assignments or added duties when the cuts went into effect. While all the groups said they wanted to protect teachers, they differed on the importance of keeping class sizes close to the 25-student maximum suggested by administrators.

Claudia Bach

"We want (parents and residents) to understand the enormity of the problem."

"For this difficult time, we didn't have such a problem raising class sizes, perhaps as high as 33," said Ronald Hill, the parent of a high school student. Hill said he had taught large classes as a graduate student and found them difficult but manageable.

A number of groups found that eliminating some class offerings would not end up saving money because it merely shifted students to other classes.

"You can eliminate physical education, and the kids aren't there," said Finance Committee Chairman Joanne Marden. "But then you have to increase class sizes for other teachers."

Some groups considered switching the high school from block to conventional scheduling, which Bach said would save money but reduce the number of credits students take from 7.5 to 6.

The two remaining budget forums, focusing on middle and elementary schools respectively, are Jan. 14 at 7 p.m. in the West Middle School media center and Jan. 22 at 7 p.m. in the West Elementary School cafeteria.

currently has professionals do is another means of cutting costs, but these are the smaller budget items in his department. "The big figures are going to be bodies," he said.

Nichols' position was trimmed down along with physical-education administrator Brian McNally's position this year. Nichols spends time teaching classes now as well as running the system-wide health program.

Middle schools finish first trimester

Andover's middle schools finished their first trimester together last Friday. The new marking schedule was piloted last year by Doherty and was picked up by West and the new Wood Hill middle schools this year.

West Middle Principal Kathy Hammond said that the longer semester gives teachers a longer time to get to know the students before grading them.

It also allows more time for improvement between progress reports and end of term.

"It gives the kid much more time to get out of a hole," said Hammond. She also says it encourages communication from parents.

"I see it as very positive," she said.

A focus on customer service

Concierge service makes clients feel comfortable – especially when it's unexpected in a nursing home

By Judy Wakefield

FAMILY MEMBERS OF NEW residents at Andover's Wingate nursing home walk through the door and often point to the concierge podium and nearby butler.

"What is this? A hotel?" someone will ask.

It's not, of course, but the new focus at the 123-bed facility located at the corner of Dascomb Road and Andover Street, is good customer service.

"We are unique with our concierge service," said administrator Anne Brennan, who does not know of another area nursing home offering services more typically associated with upscale hotels.

It's all part of the nursing home's "project quality" focus, which is getting more important these days in the ever-growing nursing home business, Brennan said.

Demographics show that people are living longer than ever, resulting in a booming business for nursing homes. But customers are also looking around more for nursing-home placement for loved ones. Wingate believes having a resident concierge gives them an edge in this educated marketplace.

"The nursing-home business is a growth industry and customers are more savvy than ever," said resident concierge Christine Bennett. "I'm the internal liaison and I can help residents get whatever they need."

It could be a hairdresser appointment, reservations for a family dinner or double-checking to make sure someone's new wheelchair will be delivered on time.

Bennett said it's all about a "hospitality aspect" long overlooked in nursing home care.

"I like to say my job is tailored after (the service you would get at) a four-star hotel," she said. "It's my job to make sure people are comfortable."

"I know everyone's name here and I pay close attention to detail. I strive to make sure nothing falls through the cracks."

CHRISTINE BENNETT, RESIDENT CONCIERGE AT WINGATE AT ANDOVER

On the job for the past nine months, Bennett does not have a nursing or medical background.

Rather, she has a strong customer-service background. This is her first job in a nursing home.

"Attention to detail will make for a quality stay," she said. "I know everyone's name here and I pay close attention to detail. I strive to make sure nothing falls through the cracks."

Bennett's job is the centerpiece of the nursing home's "project quality" focus that was approved by the owners this year. Wingate is privately owned by the Schuster family of Needham. The family owns several nursing home in the state.

Wingate, which has three floors of patient rooms, is working hard to get people talking about the concierge service.

"Putting a loved one in a nursing home is a foreign experience to most people. I make sure people don't feel dumped on," Bennett said. "I'm here to help make the experience enjoyable and comfortable."

THE EAGLE-TRIBUNE SPORTS MEMORIES AUCTION!

BRUINS DREAM DAY WITH THE CAPTAINS

You and a guest will enjoy a rare treat with this gift. First, you will attend a Boston Bruins practice session, normally closed to the public, at The FleetCenter. Then you'll go inside the Bruins dressing room for a behind-the-scenes look where you will meet one of the NHL's leading stars, team captain Joe Thornton, along with some of his teammates. Next, both you and your guest will go to lunch with Thornton, plus legendary former Bruins captain and Hockey Hall-of-Famer Johnny Bucyk, as guests of The Fours Restaurant. And in advance, to put under the tree on Christmas morning, you will get their personalized hockey sticks, one autographed by Thornton and one by Bucyk, as an early souvenir of your dream day to come.

THE WALL OF FAME

Nobody, anywhere, has this one. The very first of a phenomenal first-of-a-kind collection meant for hanging on the office, den, or game room wall of a true sports fan. Five separate custom wood-mounted montages, loaded with dozens of rare photos, of special Eagle-Tribune tributes to auto racing legend Dale Earnhardt Sr., hockey greats Ray Bourque and Bobby Orr, Red Sox immortal Ted Williams, and Bruins' No. 24, Terry O'Reilly. All five have a protective covering and are magnificently reproduced full-sized newspaper pages, each of them a spectacular piece of furniture. This is an absolutely stunning collection, forever to be remembered as that special holiday gift.

GLORY GOALIES

A treasure of time that's really priceless. Custom framed, in color, a collage of all-time great NHL goaltenders in their uniforms from the "Original 6" team era, individually autographed by each legend. They include Hockey Hall-of-Famers Gump Worsley, Glenn Hall, Johnny Bower and Chuck Rayner along with Sugar Jim Henry, Eddie Johnston, Charlie Hodge, Gerry McNeil and Dennis DeJordy. This item could be in the Hockey Hall of Fame but instead, you could be its proud owner this Christmas.

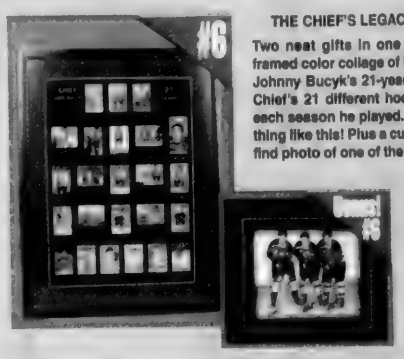

A GAME WITH DALE & GORDIE

You and a guest will go to the Bruins-New Jersey Devils game on Monday night, Dec. 30, and see the first return of former Bruins coach Pat Burns behind the bench at The FleetCenter. During the second period the two of you will get to sit with Dale Arnold and Gordie Kluzak in the NESN-TV booth as they broadcast the game. Donated by Gordie Kluzak.

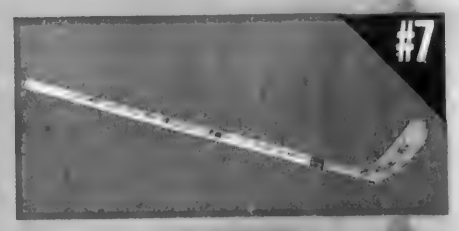

SUPER BOBBY

A special edition with an engraved plate mounted on the front, this is the most famous photo in New England sports history. Bobby Orr "flying through the air" as he scores the Stanley Cup-winning goal. Autographed and donated by Number 4 himself. Custom-framed and ready to be placed under a tree near you.

THE CHIEF'S LEGACY WITH A BONUS

Two neat gifts in one package. A special framed color collage of Bruins' Hall-of-Famer Johnny Bucyk's 21-year Boston career. The Chief's 21 different hockey cards spanning each season he played. You'll rarely see anything like this! Plus a custom framed hard-to-find photo of one of the Bruins' most famous trios in history, "The Uke Line" (Bucyk, Bronco Horvath and Vic Stasiuk), personally autographed by all three. Donated by Johnny Bucyk.

A BRUINS FAN'S SPECIAL

This is a distinctive addition to any collection, a hockey stick signed by the 2002-03 Bruins. From Joe Thornton, Glen Murray and Sergei Samsonov to Brian Rolston, Bryan Berard, Don Sweeney and P.J. Stock, they've autographed this one.

HOCKEY FAN'S BIG NIGHT OUT

Four loge seats, the best, to the Bruins-Colorado Avalanche game at The FleetCenter on Tuesday, Feb. 4, donated by The Eagle-Tribune. And you're going first-class: round trip by limo. Limousine donated by Black Tie Limousine of Haverhill.

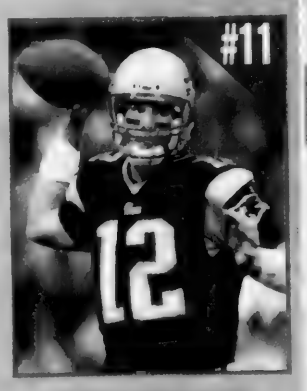

STANLEY CUP CHAMPIONS

What a classic! Custom framed and mounted, complete team photos of the 1970 and 1972 Stanley Cup champion Boston Bruins, plus individual photos spanning four decades of Phil Esposito, Gerry Cheevers, Wayne Cashman, Johnny Bucyk, Don Marcotte, Johnny "Pie" McKenzie, Dallas Smith, Rick Smith, Don Awrey, Gary Doak, Joe Thornton and Don Sweeney. Each one is personally autographed.

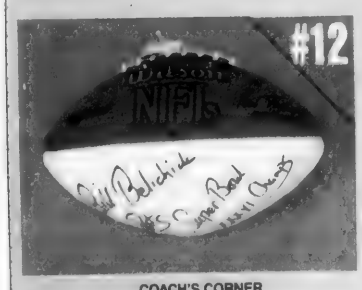

SUPER BOWL HISTORY

An absolute perfect gift for any New England Patriots fan. A custom framed reproduction of the Eagle-Tribune's spectacular color front-page game photo and account of the Patriots' Super Bowl championship win over the Rams. What makes this one a true collector's item is that it is the only one personally autographed by Super Bowl MVP Tom Brady and winning field goal kicker Adam Vinatieri.

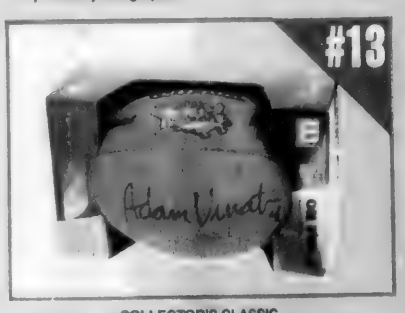

PATRIOTS PRIZE POSSESSION

There aren't many people in your neighborhood, if any, who have one of these. A New England Patriots jersey No. 12, personally autographed by quarterback Tom Brady. What a gift that makes for your special Pats' fan.

COACH'S CORNER

Few sports items are treasured in New England as much as a football autographed by Bill Belichick, the Patriots Super Bowl championship head coach.

COLLECTOR'S CLASSIC

The most famous foot in New England sports history belongs to Patriots place kicker Adam Vinatieri. And that makes this gift a special kick for any collector, a football autographed by Vinatieri.

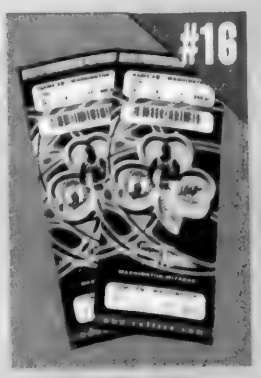

CAPTAIN CARL'S COLLECTION

We haven't seen a Triple Crown winner since the "Impossible Dream" season of Hall-of-Famer Carl Yastrzemski in 1967. Now you can have a Captain Carl "Hall of Fame" bat, plus a baseball, signed and donated by Yaz himself and Butcher Boy Meat Market.

TRIBUTE TO THE SPLENDID SPLINTER

There was and will be only one Ted Williams, the greatest hitter who ever lived. And this souvenir collector's item is a tribute to the Hall-of-Fame great, a special career memory page. A montage of rare photos including Ted's last-ever at-bat in Fenway Park (in color) that appeared in The Eagle-Tribune. This beautiful work is wood-framed and mounted. It is a gift that will be a centerpiece of any collection owned by a loyal, longtime Red Sox fan.

CELTICS GREEN

If you're going to see a Celtics game, it might as well include the greatest basketball star who ever played. And unless he gets hurt, that's what the recipient of this gift will be seeing: Two loge seats at the FleetCenter, five rows from the parquet floor, to watch the Celtics play Washington and Michael Jordan when he comes to town on January 6.

Students at South School look at the process behind painting

By Ben Hellman

A GROUP OF SOUTH ELEMENTARY second-graders gather around an easel in art teacher Jan Chapin's classroom. The students are critiquing a classmate's work of art, but it isn't a picture of a turkey or a pilgrim. The students make those too, but the swirls of colors and lines in student Laura Flynn's painting are intentionally uncontrolled. The students are learning about abstract expressionism.

Second-graders look at the painting and talk about how it was made and what they see in it. Chapin asks the group how Laura made it. "She splattered paint on a piece of paper," answers one boy. Chapin asks what they see. One student sees a butterfly, another a star. Several make out faces in the blur.

Each work is a one-of-a-kind. "Only you can make this," Chapin tells the children.

Abstract expressionism is the theme of South's Art Exposition this fall. It is the third year South has had the expo.

At this year's event, there are numerous projects and styles lining the hall ways at South. One wall is lined with masks, part of a performance students had celebrating Carnival and the Day of the Dead. There are Native American pictograms on crumpled brown paper. And there are the drip paintings.

Walking by a wall of fifth-graders' work, Chapin wonders aloud if some parents might be confused why 10- and 11-year-olds are scribbling, thrusting and dripping paint on pieces of paper. There are students' explanations beneath the pictures about how they made the Jackson Pollock-inspired works, or – equally important in abstract expressionism – how it made them feel to create the paintings.

"I felt like I was living free and just spat the paint on the paper. I didn't have to paint any certain thing," wrote fifth-grader Chris Barnaby. Happiness and excitement were other common descriptions of how thrusting out with paint made them feel.

The art program at South is integrated into the school's curriculum. Students learn the history and importance behind the art style they are working in. Pollock, Paul Klee, Vassily Kandinsky and Henri Matisse are names the children are familiar with and they know what their paintings look like.

But they are learning more, says Chapin. "It's problem solving," she said. Starting with line, shape, color and texture – the elements of art – students work their way up to symmetry, design and composition.

"It's not art for art's sake," said Chapin. Motor skills, creativity and problem-solving are factors at play. "Skills they'll use in every other subject and every other pursuit. We constantly make connections about humanity," she said. The school's specialists – art, music, health and physical-education teachers – aren't babysitting during classroom teachers' coffee breaks, she says.

But the art expo, which will remain on the walls for several weeks, is all about student accomplishment. "This is their exhibit. This is their moment," said Chapin.

New instructor to teach woodworking course

Historical Society's open house Sunday puts spotlight on fine furniture

RANDY SPRINGIS, of Springis Traditional Woodworks in Amesbury, will teach a new hand woodworking course at the Andover Historical Society starting in early 2003. A special open house will be held Sunday, Dec. 15 at 2 p.m. to introduce Springis to potential students.

A selection of Springis's fine furniture will be on display and Springis will lead guests through the Blanchard House to look at examples of fine furniture in the Historical Society's collection.

The three-part course will introduce students to the basics of hand woodworking. The first session will cover tool sharpening and tuning, and basic wood joinery. The second session will introduce students to hand planes through a small project. The third session will cover the more intricate mortise-and-tenon joint through another project.

Each session will run for four weeks; students can register for individual sessions. Classes are open to all; children ages 12 and older are welcome to attend with an adult.

The Historical Society has offered a hand woodworking course since the mid-1980s, when master carpenter John Ross moved his collection of hand tools and equipment to the Blanchard Barn. Ross's collection started with his father's tool box and grew from there. For many years, Ross taught hand woodworking at the Old Schwamb Mill in Arlington. From there the course moved to the Peabody Essex Museum in Salem, before settling into the Blanchard Barn at the Andover Historical Society in 1986. According to Ross, the collection is one of the largest outside major museums, such as Old Sturbridge Village, "except that you can use my collection." The Blanchard Barn was a natural fit, he said. "I stepped into that room and knew we were in the right place," says Ross.

WOODWORKING OPEN HOUSE
Sunday, Dec. 15
2 p.m.
Admission: Free
ANDOVER HISTORICAL SOCIETY, 97 Main St.

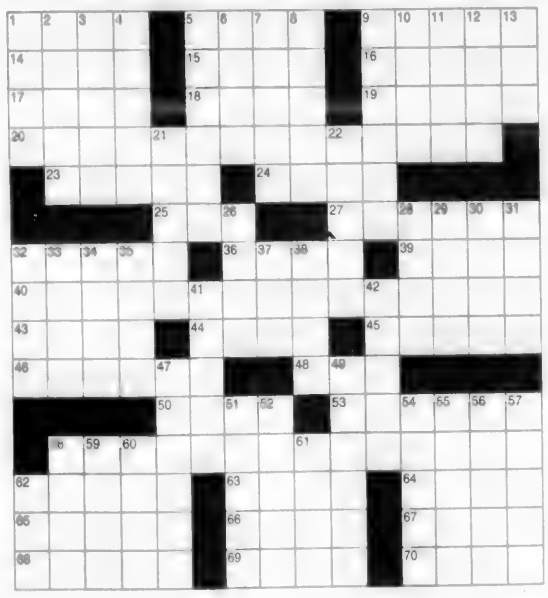

A selection of Randy Springis's fine furniture will be on display Sunday.

From 1986 until spring 2002, Ross taught the course himself. After deciding to retire from teaching, Ross and Elaine Clements Zopes, Historical Society executive director, worked with the North Bennet Street School in Boston's North End to find a new instructor. North Bennet Street alumnus Randy Springis was deemed to be the perfect fit, they said.

After a career in the US Marine Corps, Springis attended and graduated from the North Bennett Street School in 1991. For the next few years, Springis worked in a commercial cabinetry shop, learning production techniques. He set up his own shop in 1999. Since then, Springis has worked on private commissions and for museums, including the Haverhill Historical Society and Strawbery Banke in Portsmouth, N.H. Springis specializes in 18th and 19th century designs, concentrating on the Neoclassical and Federal periods.

Anyone with an interest in learning traditional hand woodworking skills or in learning more about fine furniture construction is welcome at the open house Sunday. For more information, call 978-475-2236.

The New England Classical Singers serenading shoppers.

'Carols and Lullabies' program celebrated by N.E. Classical Singers

The New England Classical Singers celebrate the holiday season with "Carols and Lullabies" tomorrow, Friday, Dec. 13 at 8 p.m. at the Rogers Center for the Arts, Merrimack College, North Andover.

The program features Benjamin Britten's beloved Ceremony of Carols, for women's chorus and harp; Carols and Lullabies – Christmas in the Southwest, by contemporary American Composer Conrad Susa, performed in 'Spanish and scored for harp, marimba, guitar, and chorus; selected works from the Georgian Republic; and seasonal carols including a contemporary version of the hauntingly beautiful Coventry Carol, contrasted with the lively French tune, Ding Dong Merrily on High.

Britten's popular Ceremony of Carols is an audience favorite. Originally written in 1942 for a boys choir, the piece brings together nine medieval and renaissance carols, ranging from the lighthearted and rejoicing Wolcom Yole! (Welcome Yule!) to the reverent There is No Rose to an almost jazzy Deo Gracias. The piece also features a celestial harp interlude performed by guest harpist Martha Moore.

In the late 1980s Minnesota conductor Philip Brunelle asked composer Conrad Susa to write a companion piece to this famous Britten work. After struggling with the idea for several years, Susa's friend Gary Holt, conductor of the San Diego Men's Chorus, showed him a collection of traditional Spanish Carols he had sung as a boy in Arizona. Susa knew he had found the material he needed, and adapted the 10 Carols into a narrative of the Christmas story. The work successfully connects the renaissance and medieval artistry of the Britten with these joyous Spanish Carols. John Muratore, guitar, Matthew Persing on marimba and vibraphone and Moore will accompany the Susa piece.

New England Classical Singers is a 40-member auditioned chorus conducted by David Hodgkins, who is also artistic director of Boston's Coro Allegro.

Tickets are $15 for adults, and $10 for students and seniors.

To order tickets or obtain information, visit www.newenglandclassical.org., or call 978-474-6090.

Large print programs and assisted listening devices will be available, and the Rogers Center is fully wheelchair-accessible.

Blaire House of Tewksbury

There are many things that make Blaire House of Tewksbury unique in the Merrimack Valley. Situated in a charming residential neighborhood in Tewksbury, this beautifully landscaped and decorated facility is committed to providing all the services an aging adult may need in one location, including Assisted Living, Adult Day Health, Skilled Nursing Centers, Sub-Acute Care, Alzheimer Care, Respite Care, Short Term Rehab, and Long Term Care. The dedication and commitment of the staff is reflected in the extra effort Blaire House makes to accommodate the special needs of clients and to connect with the community.

Paula Drelick, Assisted Living Director, explains that the impressive range of services means that a change in a resident's needs can be accommodated without the trauma of moving to another health facility. This also makes it possible for couples to stay together even when their needs differ. Paula says that working at Blaire House is more than just a job, "We care about making the extra effort. Our Assisted Living area is smaller than most, which makes it possible for us to provide more personal care. Meals and housekeeping are provided, and residents are free from the worries and expenses associated with living alone and maintaining a residence. They have time and energy to enjoy as many of our social events as they wish, both on campus and in the community. Also, our Adult Day Health Center is unique in offering help with personal hygiene. Along with the regular day program, which includes breakfast and lunch, we have a beauty salon and give clients showers."

Paula adds that Blaire House is very proud of its involvement in the community. "We host seminars in health issues and special interest topics. We are involved with senior centers and public service providers. We also have special events such as the Winter Carnival on February 16, featuring sleigh rides, chocolate sampling, music, and more, with proceeds donated to the American Heart Association."

Blaire House of Tewksbury is located at 10 Erlin Terrace, Tewksbury. For more information, telephone 978-851-3121 Visit our website www.elderservices.com

AHS PREVIEWS

Playoff hopes burn for winter varsity teams

Basketball, ice hockey, boys swim & dive teams counting on their returning veterans

By Rick Harrison

The Townsman today begins previews of the 11 Andover High varsity sports teams for the 2002-03 winter season with looks at boys basketball, girls basketball, boys ice hockey, girls ice hockey and boys swim & dive.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Those in attendance at Andover High boys basketball games this winter can be assured of several things.

They will have fun. They will be entertained. And they will get more bang for their buck from a squad that promises to run hickety-split up and down the court from opening tip to final buzzer.

It's a formula guaranteed to please and one head coach Dave Fazio hopes will bring plenty of wins and, dare he say it, a possible state championship banner.

"We need to get a big flag (banner) to hang in the gym," said Fazio, while putting the troops through their paces for tomorrow night's season opener against Tewksbury at the Dunn Gym (7:30 p.m. tipoff).

"The little ones (league and tournament titles) are nice, but we need something bigger and more impressive. I want to know what Marilyn (Fitzgerald) feels like."

Fitzgerald is very familiar with those "big banners" as her girls swim and dive team, of which Fazio is a zealous No. 1 fan, has won four straight state titles.

The Golden Warriors graduated four players from last year's 16-8 team, which won the Merrimack Valley Conference Division 1 title (11-2 league record), placed third in the Greater Lawrence Christmas Tournament and reached the second round of the Division 1 North Tournament where it dropped an 84-67 decision to Lexington.

It was the fifth MVC championship (four outright, one shared) for Fazio's teams, and the 13th consecutive year the coach has guided Andover to a tourney berth.

Fazio reached his milestone 200th career victory at AHS last season and sports a fine 204-89 overall mark (.696 winning percentage).

Gone from that squad are graduates Pat Stockwood (now attending Bridgewater State College), Anthony Silva (Roger Williams), Chris Brouillard (Bentley) and Brendan Smith (prep school transfer).

Stockwood was top scorer among that quartet with 210 points last season.

Returning starters are junior guard and Capt. Chris Vetrano (5'9"), senior forward and Capt. Kevin Barrett (6'3") and junior guard Jack Barrett (5'11").

Vetrano, bigger and stronger this year, is one of the best players in the state and could become Andover's all-time scoring leader this season.

He already has 1,010 points in two years (416 as a freshman, 594 as a sophomore). He has 150 career three-pointers, including a school single-season record 91 last winter, and he has also converted 247 free throws.

Vetrano is chasing Tom McLaughlin's school record for career points and needs about 500 more.

The Barrett brothers, who moved to town from Reading last year, were the second and third leading scorers for the Golden Warriors as Jack had 289 points and Kevin 263 in 2001-'02.

Other players who earned letters are senior forward Tyler Richards (6'4"), senior forward Drew Watts (6'4") and junior guard Jarrett Mackin (5'11").

Four juniors and three promising freshmen complete the 13-player varsity roster, culled from an impressive turnout of 85 candidates including 45 freshmen and 20 sophomores.

The junior newcomers are guards Jon Deleo (5'11"), Steve Renfro (5'10"), Manny Venuti (5'8") and Tim Bengston (5'9").

The ninth graders are forward Bob Hughes (6'4"), guard Greg Vetrano (5'7") and guard Casey Cosgrove (5'5").

The younger Vetrano and Cosgrove will likely split time between the varsity and JV teams.

"Our biggest strengths are the backcourt, team speed and defensive tenacity," said Fazio. "We'll play a lot of man-to-man and up-tempo. We want to run, run, run at all costs.

"The one piece missing from the puzzle is a big rebounder to clear the boards, dish the outlet pass and get the fast break started."

Andover scrimmaged perennial Boston City Division 2 powerhouse Charlestown last weekend at home, outscoring the visitors by a wide 47-29 margin in the first half.

The only other scrimmage was earlier this week against New Hampshire Division 1 team Nashua.

Fazio sees no weak sisters in MVC 1, beginning with archrival Central Catholic which has virtually its entire team back from last year.

"You never know what to expect from Lawrence, Haverhill, Methuen and Lowell — except that they'll be competitive and give us trouble," said Fazio.

The Golden Warriors' non-league schedule rivals the toughest in the state.

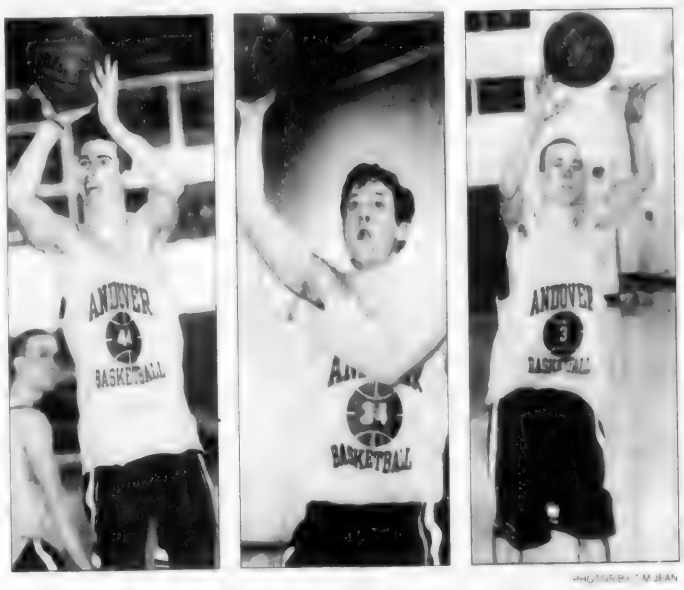

In addition to the Christmas Tournament, the locals host St. John's Prep of Danvers next Thursday, play at Newton North Jan. 19, at Central Mass. juggernaut Holy Name of Worcester Jan. 28 and home versus Brockton Feb. 4.

AHS will be joined in the annual four-team AT&T Broadband Tournament Feb. 15-16 by heavyweights Charlestown, Brookline and host Boston College High.

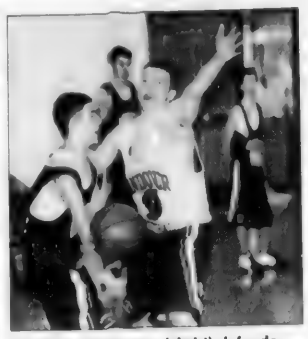

"I think every non-league team we play will be ranked in the state's Top 20 by tournament time," said Fazio.

Returning coaches are Bob Hatem (JV), Carol Martini and Chris Downer (freshmen).

Cross country coach Leo Lafond also joins the staff this year to help with the JV team.

Hooping it up for the Golden Warriors are, from left: Tyler Richards (No. 44), Drew Watts (No. 34), and Jack Barrett (No. 3). The season begins Friday night.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The toughest thing is to continue flirting with 20-win seasons, league and tournament titles year after year.

But so far Andover High girls varsity hoop coach Jim Tildsley has been able to keep producing hallmark teams season after season.

Last year was no exception, as the Lady Warriors won the Merrimack Valley Conference Division 1 title for the fifth time in seven years (undefeated in league), won the Greater Lawrence Christmas Tournament for a sixth time in seven seasons, won the AT&T Broadband Tournament for the first time, reached the Division 1 North final for the fifth time and finished 21-2 overall.

Tildsley's first seven AHS teams, blessed with a succession of outstanding players including Muller sisters Charlotte, Sarah and Jenny, Lisa Tisbert, Ashley McLaughlin, Lindsey Pearson, Janice Coppolino, Megan Pinksten and Shannon Sweeney, have posted a remarkable 139-22 won-lost record (.863 winning percentage).

The quest for another banner campaign begins tomorrow night at Tewksbury (7:30 p.m.).

The home opener next Tuesday night is an early-season gem — with archrival Central Catholic due at the Dunn Gym (7:30 p.m.).

Graduates from last year's club are second-high-scorer Pinksten (now playing at Assumption), Sweeney (attending Northeastern), Katie Kramer (soccer scholarship to University of Michigan) and Kelly McLaughlin (UMass Amherst).

Pinksten scored 265 points last year and 782 for her career, Sweeney had 518 career points and Kramer was as tenacious a defensive player as there was around.

The returning starters are two of the best girls hoop players in the state, senior guard and Capt. Jenny Muller (5'7") and junior forward Ashley McLaughlin (6'1").

Muller pumped in a team-best 393 points last winter, and over her three-year career she has 1,078 points while also averaging close to five assists, five rebounds and five steals per game.

McLaughlin, a Street & Smith pre-season All-American honorable mention, netted 260 points as a sophomore and has 441 points through two years.

McLaughlin is also an outstanding playmaker, rebounder and overall defender.

Other letterwinners from last season are senior forward Samantha Hughes (5'8"), senior guard Merry Fish (5'5"), senior forward Kerrie Dargan (5'8"), junior forward Matia Kostakis (5'11"), junior guard Liz Pallotta (5'7") and junior forward Meagan Merinder (5'11").

New to the fold are junior forward Kerri O'Dea, junior center Colleen Haugh (5'11"), junior guard Arianna Miliotis (5'6"), sophomore guard Jackie Powers (5'7") and sophomore guard Brittany Murphy (5'6").

"We have some gaps to plug," said eighth-year coach Tildsley. "All four graduates played integral roles for us. I believe we lost more key players than anyone in the league.

"We're quicker than last year and we'll really push the ball up the floor this season.

"Other strengths are senior leadership and the winning tradition that has been established over the years.

"We don't have the same wide bodies underneath but that shouldn't hurt us much," said Tildsley. "We still want to play the low-post game.

"The attitude was excellent the first week of practice — but we had trouble making the shots fall in our scrimmage games."

The only non-league games are two in the four-team Greater Lawrence Christmas Tournament (Methuen, North Andover, Salem, N.H.) scheduled at Methuen High this year, home against Boston Latin (Dec. 30), two in the AT&T Broadband Tournament at Boston College High (Feb. 15-16), and reigning Rhode Island state champ Ponagansett at home (Feb. 1).

"Each year it gets tougher to schedule non-league games," said Tildsley. "No one wants to play you unless they figure they can beat you.

"We advertised for opponents and Ponagansett gave us a call. They're coming up and staying overnight. That should be a good test for us. Latin is also supposed to be very strong this year."

AHS had home scrimmages against Masconomet Regional of Topsfield, Bishop Guertin of Nashua, N.H. and Norwich, Conn. High. The locals also hit the road for a pre-season game at Westwood High earlier this week.

Tildsley looks at a predominantly veteran MVC and believes Central Catholic, Haverhill, Lowell and Methuen will all be strong in Division 1. Tewksbury and Chelmsford are potential challengers in Division 2.

Assistant coaches once again are Dick Muller, Susan Rogers (JV) and Stephanie Ragucci (freshmen).

Both the Andover boys and girls basketball teams are selling T-shirts this season, for $10 each, with proceeds to benefit the hoop program.

"They're Navy blue with a gold eagle and an inscription," said Tildsley. "They look sharp and it's a good buy."

The shirts will also be available at Andover Church League games on Saturday afternoons at the AHS Field House.

The teams hope to sell 1,000 shirts during the course of the season.

BOYS ICE HOCKEY

The Andover High boys varsity hockey team will open defense of its Merrimack Valley Conference/Dual County League Division 2 championship on Dec. 21 when it hosts perennial power Boston Latin at the Merrimack Valley Forum in Lawrence.

The 2002-03 season opener, meanwhile, is set three days earlier (next Wednesday) when the locals travel to Lowell for a 6 p.m. league crossover against the Division 3 Red Raiders at the Janas Rink.

The Golden Warriors return 14 players from last year's 11-8-3 crew, which went two games deep in the Division 2 North Tournament with a 6-5 win over Pentucket Regional of West Newbury and a tough 4-3 loss to St. Mary's of Lynn.

All three top graduates will be sorely missed. Two-time All-Conference choice Tim LeGrow anchored the defense while scoring 48 career points over four years. Peter Burbank was the leading scorer last season with 16-17-33 points and George Lewis was a three-year mainstay on the blue line.

Veteran coach Bill Cullen is kicking off his 12th year at AHS and 34th season overall, including 15 at Wilmington and brief assistant's stints at Acton-Boxboro and Methuen.

His Andover won-lost-tied record is 107-91-28, with milestone win No. 100 coming last winter.

Ten of his 12 Golden Warrior teams have qualified for the MIAA Tournament, and last year's league (division) title stands alongside the 1995 co-championship with Tewksbury (Elite 8 qualifier that year).

There are 11 returning forwards, led by senior Capt. Steve Johnson (6-13-19 points last year and 18-28-46 career) and senior Capt. Mike Corey (16-16-32 and 27-32-59) who will skate together. They will be joined by freshman newcomer Matt Colby.

A line with three veterans has senior Capt. Joe Nasta (6-15-21), junior Toby Cohen and senior John Limauro (8-4-12).

The third line consists of seniors

Warriors' Stamas and Stevens named All-Conference

Andover High senior football standouts Nick Stamas and Russell Stevens have been selected first-team Merrimack Valley All-Conference for the 2002 season.

Both players were named on the defensive side of the ball, Stamas in the secondary and Stevens in the line.

Stamas also played quarterback the final six games of the season, leading the Golden Warriors to a 3-3 record while scoring a team-high 40 points and throwing for 1,026 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Freshman Buddy Farnham was named second-team defensive back.

Earning honorable-mention status for AHS were running back Jason White, nose guard Jordan Thibault, wide receiver Dennis Collins, offensive linemen Phil Perkins, Ben Newman and running back Matt Hennessy.

Named MVC co-Players of the Year were running back/linebackers Steve Kasprzak of Tewksbury (139 points, 1,450 yards rushing) and Matt Maroon of Central Catholic (136 points, 1,703 yards).

The Defensive MVP is Lowell High middle linebacker Pat Sheehan and the Offensive MVP Methuen running back Derrick Marsan.

AHS PREVIEWS

Andrew Santos (3-4-7), Steve Miller and Sergi Yerozolimsky.

Senior Mark Boilard and junior Mike VanCampen will skate with junior newcomer John Ianelli.

The 11th veteran forward, Capt. Steve Seero, was recently diagnosed with mononucleosis and he will be sidelined indefinitely.

Returning defensemen are junior partners Brian Buckley and Dennis Collins, along with senior Eric Levine who will pair up in rotation with junior newcomer Matt Fabiani and senior newcomer John Linneman.

Also on the blue line is freshman Greg Carroll, while sophomore Matt Quinlan is still recuperating from a broken leg suffered during the football season.

"Our biggest strength should be overall depth," said coach Cullen.

"The goaltending should be solid, and the biggest challenge is finding another proven scorer to go with Corey, Johnson, Nasta and Limauro."

Cullen feels Westford Academy could be the scary up-and-comer in MVC Division 2 this winter.

"Bostin Latin and Methuen are always strong, and Lincoln-Sudbury beat us last year (3-2), so there isn't an easy one in the bunch."

Overall in the league Division 1 Chelmsford looks untouchable.

AHS scrimmaged Woburn and Bishop Guertin of Nashua, N.H. last weekend, as well as Canton High yesterday.

The locals will battle Triton Regional of Byfield on Saturday at the annual Methuen Jamboree.

Andover is also entered in a pair of four-team tournaments.

On Dec. 23 the locals will face Cape Ann League power Wilmington in the Haverhill Christmas Tournament (3 p.m.). The championship and consolation games are scheduled Dec. 30.

On Feb. 16, AHS faces off against Triton Regional of Byfield in the Newburyport Bank Classic semifinals at Graf Rink (6 p.m.). The championship and consolation games are scheduled Feb. 20.

Ralph Quaglietta begins his 18th year as Andover JV coach and former Lawrence High player Bill Blackwell starts his 12th season as Cullen's varsity assistant.

New to the coaching staff this year is volunteer Mark Beliveau, a former Middlebury College standout player and current assistant golf pro at Andover Country Club.

GIRLS HOCKEY

Thanks to its outstanding success as a first-year varsity team, the Andover High girls ice hockey squad has been rewarded with a place in the highly-competitive North Cape 2 League for the 2002-'03 season.

The Lady Warriors went 13-1 last year as an independent, preferring not to opt for MIAA Tournament eligibility because the team was put together quickly and no one really expected it to do so well in a test-the-waters campaign.

"The girls are excited about this season," said head coach Bill McCarthy. "We're in a league, we have a very strong 20-game schedule and this is the real deal.

"Our No. 1 goal is to qualify for the tournament."

The first step will be taken this Saturday afternoon with an away game against Westford Academy (12:50 p.m.), while the home opener is set for next Wednesday night at the Phillips Academy Smith Rink versus Wilmington (6:10 p.m.).

Some of the new and challenging opponents on the schedule are multi-time state champ Acton-Boxboro, Arlington High, Boston Latin, Walthm, St. Bernard's of Fitchburg and Lincoln-Sudbury.

The lone scrimmage was against Austin Prep last weekend.

Leading the list of 12 returners are the four captains, senior defensemen Jackie Collins and Jessica Leider and senior forwrds Katie Seero and Katie Stewart.

Leider has been sidelined with a non-hockey related knee injury.

Junior veterans are defenseman Allison Abreu, goaltender Dolly Beechinor, forward Megan Finn and forward Adrienne Shea.

Sophomores who played last year are forwards Kim Chandler, Jacqui Munro and goalie Elissa Slovin who is coming off an outstanding season as the field hockey netminder.

Six freshman newcomers complete the squad, defenders Alley Brown and Liz Roda along with forwards Kristen Costagliola, Amy Marlow, Maria Nasta and Sam Weinberg.

"We have three solid lines but are a bit shy of bodies on defense," said McCarthy. "We don't have a lot of people back on the blue line — especially with Leider hurt. But we'll be counting on her, Collins and Abreu to shore up the defense.

"Dolly (Beechinor) did a tremendous job for us in goal last year and having her back is a big plus."

Shea led the team in scoring last winter with 12 goals and 8 assists for 20 points, while other top marksmen were Ashley Malins (9-4-13) and Katie Stewart (5-7-12). Malins and Stewart each had a hat trick.

Senior Grace Farnham, who had 5 goals and 10 assists last season, is unable to play hockey this year and her talents will be missed.

Coach McCarthy, who lives in Stoneham, was born in Medford and played high school hockey at state power Arlington Catholic and college hockey at West Point.

Prior to the AHS job he spent several years as the assistant boys hockey coach at Newburyport High.

Former Andover standout player Dana DiFiore returns as an assistant and Tara Hancock is aboard as a part-time volunteer assistant.

"We owe a debt of thanks to the Andover Hockey Association for donating ice time to us in December, January and February," said McCarthy. "That's a big help to the program."

BOYS SWIM & DIVE

The Andover High boys swim and dive team hopes to improve on its solid performance last winter, when the locals put together a 6-4 Merrimack Valley Conference dual-meet record and then placed ninth at the North Sectional Championship Meet.

The locals also had several outstanding individual finishes at the Sectionals and State Meet.

"I think we have all the events covered pretty evenly this year," said coach Mark Taffe, who begins his fifth season at the Golden Warriors' helm. "We have a number of versatile kids and we should be able to match up against our opponent's strengths in every meet."

AHS graduated five seniors and will definitely miss the contributions of Rob Lakow, Gary Chen, Phil Martin, Adam Edelstein and Bert Gilbert.

Heading the group of 15 returning veterans is junior Sean Geary, the reigning State and North Sectional champ in the 500 yard freestyle.

Geary also placed second in the 200 free at last year's North Sectionals, and he will specialize in the middle-distance and distance freestyles as well as the IM.

Other swimmers who scored top 12 in both the Sectionals and State Meet last year are juniors Nick Saunders (sprint free, butterfly) and Paul D'Ambrosio (backstroke, middle-distance free).

The only two seniors on the 21-member squad are Capt. Mike Avila (butterfly, middle distances) and Paul Wang (freestyle.).

Other juniors include sprint freestyler Ben Carter, Zac Broomfield (middle distances, IM), Bob O'Neill (one meter diving, freestyle), Joe Reynolds (middle distances, backstroke), Steve Fang (freestyle, breasttstroke) and Greg Robinson (butterfly, freestyle).

Sophomores are Tom Avila (breaststroke, freestyle), Chris Mullen (freestyle), Jon Meltz (IM, backstroke) and Felipe Machado (freestyle.).

Freshmen new to the team are R.J. Samuels (IM, breaststroke), Joe Savoco (one meter diving, free sprints), Rob Medaglio (butterfly, IM), Matt Biles (freestyle) and Mike Stewart (freestyle, backstroke)

Junior Dave Balesta (freestyle, breaststroke) is also a first-year swimmer.

Coach Taffe sees multi-time reigning league champ Chelmsford as the team to beat once again.

"It's Chelmsford and then the rest of us trying to claw our way up," he noted. "Lowell should be stronger and we always have tough meets with Haverhill."

Adam Moskal, who swam for the Golden Warriors in the mid-1990's, is a volunteer assistant coach.

The season opens tomorrow afternoon with an MVC dual meet at Lowell (3:30 p.m., Riddick Field House pool).

Andover will again swim its home meets at the Greater Lawrence Vo-Tech pool, and the first home meet is Dec. 20 versus Nashua, N.H.

Andover Church Basketball League tips off its 57th consecutive season

The Andover Church Basketball League, established in 1946, kicked off its 57th consecutive season of operation last Saturday with games throughout the afternoon in all six divisions.

There was action at the Andover High Field House in the boys and girls Junior, Intermediate and Senior Divisions.

This is also a milestone 25th year as president of the ACBL for Bob French.

The league boasts 51 teams plus two ACBL-sponsored 7th- and 8th-grade girls travel teams.

"Altogether, we have close to 600 players," said French. "We can't handle any more at this time with the facilities at our disposal."

The league hopes to have the use of the gyms at the new High Plain Elementary and Wood Hill Middle schools next year.

Skate with the Warriors on Dec 15

The Merrimack College hockey team will hold its annual Skate with the Warriors holiday tradition on Sunday, December 15, at the Volpe Athletic Center beginning at 1 p.m.

Fans are invited to meet the team members, who will be in uniform for photo purposes, as well as Santa Claus.

Skating and refreshments are free of charge. The event is sponsored by Domino's Pizza.

All fans attending are asked to bring an unwrapped toy to donate to the US Marines Toys for Tots program.

AUTOMOTIVE

The 2003 BMW 325xi AWD sedan. Dry asphalt. Loose gravel. Wet leaves. Drifted snow.

Welcome to the 325xi's all-season playground. With a 38%-front 62%-rear torque split, the 325xi behaves as any 3 Series sedan should on dry roads: with sporty rear-wheel-drive balance and feel. When faced with nature's bullies, its extra ground clearance, permanent all-wheel-drive, and Dynamic Stability Control (DSC-X) fight them off with proficient wherewithal. Meanwhile, BMW's Head Protection System (HPS) and other standard safety systems grant a healthy dose of self-assurance. Which is handy any time of year for taking out the spry 184-horsepower 325xi for some serious fun.

2003 BMW 325xi AWD sedan.
